 The IHE Standards Adoption Process: achieving practical interoperability from Standards to IHE Profiles, closing the compatibility gaps:

- Regional and national health information exchange projects: connecting care
- Integrated hospitals (cardiology, laboratory, radiology, pathology, patient care devices, etc.)
- Adoption in operational projects, world-wide

This part will be strategic, but will use the case of a specific profile (implementation guide) to show how the development begins, the selection of standards, the place where vendors participate to implement the profiles, the point where test tools are developed, and interoperable products are integrated into hospital, regional and national projects.

14:00 – 14:30 Integrating the Healthcare Enterprise, its critical contribution to interoperability World-wide
Charles Parisot, Manager, Interoperability Standards and Testing, GE Healthcare, France
IHE IT Infrastructure Planning co-Chair
 IHE is an international organization that brings together over 300 stakeholder organizations such as healthcare professional associations, government agencies, healthcare providers and research organizations and industry to improve the way computer systems in healthcare share information. By promoting the coordinated use of established standards such as HL7 V2, V3 and CDA, IHE greatly simplifies the implementation of interoperable systems in support of optimal patient care both within care delivery enterprises and across care settings in regional and national networks. This presentation will provide an overview of the standards adoption and testing processes used by IHE and highlight some of its standards-based profile specifications that address information exchange for a broad range of healthcare workflows. A number of successful ehealth projects worldwide that have taken advantage of IHE will be surveyed.
